Tips on contacting elected officials:

- Most effective way to reach your elected officials is in person—go to their office or a coffee hour
- Phone calls are the next most effective; then use email
- Give your name and address, and tell why you are contacting them
- Use your own words to tell your story; don't use attack words. Be constructive, and ask for a response.
- If you're referring to legislation, make the contact before the vote, and refer to the bill by its number

Sharing your opinions may help determine how your elected officials vote on a given issue or what kind of policy decisions they make.
